

Can you help us improve hospital communication with patients and their families/carers?

Have you been in hospital or visited a relative within the last year?

Who are we?

We are a team of university and hospital researchers studying the quality of communication between clinical teams when they handover patients to another ward or shift.

Who are we looking for?

We are looking for people who have been in hospital or visited a relative within the last year to participate in a telephone interview of not more than 20 minutes to learn from your views and experiences of communication with patients and families/carers. This project is running from January to April 2018.

Patients and their families/carers have a valuable contribution to make in this research, so we hope you will consider taking part to help improve healthcare.

Want to learn more?

Please read our information sheet which is available from betterhandovers.org.uk/ or telephone 07709 667331 and we will post you a copy.
